Good morning!

I hope everyone was able to enjoy the gorgeous weather this past weekend – and I hope all of you who are moms, or do any kind of mothering, were able to enjoy your Mothers' Day. From some of the photos I saw on social media, it looks like some of you celebrated by going to Artsfest. Congratulations to our faculty in the Fine Arts and Humanities department who ran a successful tent, and to the art students who walked away with People's Choice awards.

As we wind down the semester, there are lots of fun events on the calendar. Here are a few this week:

OTC Lebanon's First Annual Line Worker Rodeo: I grew up in the Ozarks, so I've been to my fair share of rodeos. But tomorrow's Line Worker Rodeo in at the Lebanon Education Center will definitely be a first for me. The event runs from 10 a.m. until 2 p.m., so if you can't attend in person, watch for pics on social media.

OTC Choir Spring Concert: Tomorrow night at 7 p.m., join us at Drury Stone Chapel for "Draw the Circle Wide." Both the OTC Concert Choir and the OTC Chamber Choir will perform. The spring concert is always one of my favorite ways to celebrate such a joyful season.

Early Childhood Education Center Graduation: On Friday at 6 p.m. in Lincoln 211, our littlest Eagles will take flight into kindergarten. If you need a smile, this event will do the trick.

Take a deep breath; we're almost there. Have a great last week of the semester!
